(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Plans for the reorganization of the American Olympic committee into a permanent organization were announced here today at a meeting of the committee. President Gustavus Kirby, of the American Olympic committee, presided.

It was decided that the first meeting of the new association and the adoption of its constitution and by-laws to govern it would be held here on Wednesday, December 28, next. This will be during the week in which the national collegiate athletic association, which includes Palmer E. Pierce, U. S. attorney, president, will hold its annual meeting here. It was deemed advisable to have the initial meeting of the new American Olympic governing body held at that time, when full representatives of American colleges and universities will be able to attend.

Plans submitted by the committee, of which General Pierce and President Kirby are members, were considered, and it was decided to adopt the following:

That there be organized an association to be known as the American Olympic Association.

That the new association become a member of the American association.

National clay court men's championship, Chicago, time and place to be designated by the Western Tennis Association.

World's national championship, West Side Club, Forest Hills, New York, date not set.

The Philadelphia Country Club was a contender for the latter tournament, but it was ruled out by Madame Suzanne Lenglen, the young French girl who holds the European championship, is expected to play in the matches, and the facilities for handling crowds are poor. Her world would be greater than at the Philadelphia Club. Buffalo contended for the national clay court men's singles, but was defeated by Chicago by a vote of 21 to 15.

The time and place of the women's clay court championship will be left to the executive committee to decide at the March meeting.

The best singles match for the Davis cup tournament was suggested for Newark, R. I., and other preliminary matches to Pittsburgh, Chicago, Indianapolis, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Northwestern Tennis Association, the city to be chosen by the association. The dates and final locations were left to the Davis Cup Committee.

Changes amateur Ruling.

At the January session the association voted to change the rules concerning amateur players to read that any tennis player becomes a professional when he allows his name to be printed upon a tennis racket or other tennis paraphernalia, whether or not he receives money for the use of his name.

The only contest in the selection of national champions came in the choosing of a representative of the middle States. Paul W. Gibbons, of Philadelphia, was elected over W. H. Conroy, also of Philadelphia, by a vote of 104 to 96. The names of clubs throughout the country voted by proxy, which accounted for the large number.

Another important step taken at the meeting today was the decision to confine future annual rankings to twenty names each in men's, women's and junior singles, and to ten names in the men's doubles. Heretofore a limited number had been included.

The decision was the result of the enormous amount of work connected with the rankings and the necessary expense. Last year six thousand players were considered and the cost of filing fees amounted to $1,000.

Elect Myrick President.

The association, after much discussion, had agreed that the men's doubles championships would be held in connection with the men's doubles tournament instead of the women's tournament. Officers elected were: President, J. S. Myrick, New York; vice-president, E. P. Tracy, Clinton, N. Y.; secretary, G. Garland, Birmingham; treasurer, J. N. Jennings, Buffalo, N.Y.

The annual report showed that the association had assets of $22,000. The committee in charge of the American committee of the United States National Tennis Association with the International Tennis Association and the International Olympic Association reported that it was impossible to take this step at the present time. The committee said it was unable to improve the world's ranking system, however, so the rule was made that the latter body had the right to grant the world's grass court tournaments to England each year. The international association, established several years ago abroad and comprises most of the national federations of other countries, the committee however, felt that the tournaments should be held in various countries and decided that until this rule was worked out the United States association should be allowed to be a member.

The report recommended that the Davis cup team to England and Australia should be given a special allowance.

The Davis cup team to the Davis cup team to England and Australia showed that over and above all receipts, the trip had cost about $6,000.
